

BOOKLIST 2011/ 2012

Most books in these lists are recommended for preliminary reading for students' semester 1 modules. Reading lists for semester 2 and later modules can be obtained once students are at the University.

Students who are sure which modules they will be taking in their first semester are advised to purchase books and equipment in good time. Books marked with an asterisk should be purchased and read before the beginning of the course. In cases of doubt regarding choice of modules, students may prefer to wait until after module registration before making purchases.

The University of Stirling Book Shop will carry stock of all recommended texts, and is prepared to accept orders for postal delivery. You should contact John Smith & Son, University of Stirling Book Shop, The Andrew Miller Building, Stirling FK9 4LF, Telephone 01786 473891 or E-Mail sb@johnsmith.co.uk.

Current prices are quoted but are subject to change.

All books listed for year 1 entries should also be read by those entering years 2 and 3. On some subjects, additional books are needed if entering year 2 and 3.

Economics

A good preparation for the study of economics in the first year is to achieve familiarity with current economic issues by reading periodicals which publish articles by economists e.g. "The Economist", "The Times", "The Guardian", "The Financial Times", "The Independent".

Economics \(7th Edition 2008\) £50.99, M Parkin, M Powell & K Matthews, Addison-Wesley ISBN 9781408268681

This book indicates the sort of material covered in the two introductory modules ECN111 and ECN112. Those admitted direct to the second year would be expected to be proficient in all the topics included in the book.

Education

Instead of specifying a core textbook for this module, we have provided a reader (available free online) with some background readings on each seminar topic and an extended reading list in each case for those who are interested in learning more. The reader also includes the media articles that are the basis for the first assignment. However, this is not to say that you should not purchase a textbook – indeed it would be beneficial for you to do so, especially if you are planning to continue with the study of education (eg those intending to train as teachers). The following are worth consideration:

Scottish Education: Beyond Devolution \(3rd edition 2008\) £29.99, Bryce TGK, Humes WM, Edinburgh, Edinburgh University Press, ISBN 9780748625932. (We strongly advise that students intending to go on to the professional ITE programme buy this book, as it provides essential background to the Scottish Education System)

Introduction to Education Studies \(2nd edition 2007\), £22.99, Bartlett.S, Burton.D, London, Sage, ISBN 9781412921947. (This provides good background on a range of generic educational issues and will be useful for modules EDU9E1 and EDU9E2)

An Introduction to the Study of Education \(3rd edition 2008\), £22.99, Matheson.D \(Ed\), London, David Fulton, ISBN 9780415453653

The use of Calculators in Mathematics and Statistics at the University of Stirling:

Many students have enquired as to what sort of calculators they should purchase in preparation for their University career. It should be noted that programmable (or graphical) calculators are not allowed in mathematics examinations and therefore students should have a simple cheap scientific (non-programmable) calculator.

Philosophy

First year entrants should purchase the following book, which is used as the core text in both the first and second semesters:

Reason and Responsibility: Readings in Some Basic Problems of Philosophy \(14th Edition\) £43.99, J Feinberg and R Shafer-Landau, Thomson Wadsworth ISBN 9780495813149

In addition, the following works are general introductions to philosophical topics that are recommended for students wanting to acquaint themselves with the subject:

Think £9.50, S Blackburn, Oxford University Press, ISBN 9780192854254

Second year entrants should read the introductory books by Nagel and Blackburn mentioned above and the two dialogues by Plato that will be taught in the first two weeks of PHI913 – The Apology and the Crito. There are several inexpensive editions of these (e.g. Hackett or World's Classics) and the translations can be found on the Internet at <http://classics.mit.edu>.

Politics

The best general preparation for the undergraduate study of Politics is to read carefully the political pages in one or more of the 'quality' newspapers. Perhaps invest in a current affairs periodical (such as The Economist) or one of the periodicals especially produced for students, such as Talking Politics.
